On the Continent-- Pirate and Three Cutters --Life of Lord Napier--Brussels--Lausanne-- Snarley Yow -- Pacha of Many Tales --Correspondence--Farewells party-- Diary on the Continent --Letters to Mrs. Bury Palliser. In 1835, Captain Marryat, accompanied by his wife and children, left England, and proceeded to the capital of Belgium. In his own words, Not one day was our departure postponed; with post-horses and postillions, we posted, post-haste, to Brussels. During the month of his sojourn there, he visited Malines and Antwerp, and was invited to the receptions given at the Court of Leopold I. His political and general ideas of this country and Switzerland are to be found in his Diary on the Continent, a journal that now forms part of a collection of fugitive pieces in a book called Olla Podrida, and which was published in 1840. On the 26th of...
