Excerpt from The Destructive Influence: Of the Tariff Upon Manufacture and Commerce and the Figures and Facts Relating Thereto The tariff laws of the United States all bear one and the same characteristic feature, namely, the absence of a rational foundation for their claim of protecting American manufacturing industries. The word Protection presupposes the existence of a foreign power against which protection is desired. It would be reasonable to infer that those attempting this protection should inquire into the composition of that foreign power, to wit, the industries of foreign nations, and the tariffs upon which these foreign industries are based. Had the framers of our tariff laws made such inquiry, they would have found that the starting-point of all industrial nations, from whom our industries are to find protection, is that of free raw materials. The strongest protective tariffs, like those of Germany and France, make no exception to this rule. The United States, on the other hand, commence their industrial production with rates ranging from twenty to sixty percent, on raw materials, with rates so...
