Routledge, 2009. Book Condition: New. Brand New, Unread Copy in Perfect Condition. A+ Customer Service! Summary: It is intended to retain the structure of the book from the first edition. Of course, the prologue and epilogue will be updated in light of changes elsewhere in the text. Key changes to the chapters are outlined below: PART ONE: CONTEXT The first chapter of the book, Tracing Interest in Sports Tourism is essentially a brief historical overview of the development of sports tourism and as such will remain largely untouched. However, the second chapter in this first part, An Overview of the Sports Tourism Link, will be substantially updated to include more recent research on the implications of linking sport and tourism. PART TWO: PARTICIPANTS Part two commences with chapter three, Conceptualising the Sports Tourist, which examines motivations for sports tourism, and the interaction of participants with place. Two key developments in this chapter will be a further development of the material on place, and a discussion of cultural motivations for sports tourism (to supplement the discussions of physical, interpersonal and status & prestige motivations from the first edition). In addition, a discussion of ?vicarious? sports tourism experiences will take place. Chapter four, which discusses Participant Profiles, will undergo a general updating. Finally in this part, chapter five, A Typology of Sports Tourists will be developed further to reflect the changes made in chapters three and four, and this will include modifications to the ?Sports Tourism Participation Model'. PART THREE: POLICY The first chapter in this part, The Policy Context (chapter six), will undergo a general updating, with exemplars being updated to reflect changes to policy structures since the first edition. Chapter Seven, Prospects for Integration, will be developed to discuss the success or failure of more recent policy initiatives for linking...
